A wanted suspect was killed in a police-involved shooting in Rochester, N.H., the New Hampshire attorney general told reporters last night.

Douglas Heath, 38, was shot and killed about 3:15 p.m., Attorney General Gordon MacDonald said. WMUR reported that MacDonald said officers were present but said it was unclear who fired the fatal shot or shots.

A witness told the TV station that she and her husband saw a man holding a gun get out of a vehicle. Police told the man to drop the gun, and when he didn't, police shot the man.
