Fayetteville police said they had no updates Wednesday on the condition of a pregnant woman stabbed at an apartment off Raeford Road.

Stephanie Williams, 34, was listed in stable condition after the attack Tuesday at Treetop Garden Apartments. Her attacker, 40-year-old Lemuel Bunn of Roanoke Rapids, was shot by police and later died.

On Wednesday, a nursing supervisor at Cape Fear Valley Medical Center said Williams was not on a list of patients whose conditions the hospital can release.

Officer Asia Cannon, a spokeswoman for Fayetteville police, said she could not provide any updates on the case.

Officers responding to a 911 call from Williams forced their way into the apartment and found her bleeding. Bunn, holding her neck with a knife, refused orders from police, according to the department. An officer then shot Bunn.

Cannon said she expects the officer's name will be released this week. The officer is on administrative duty as State Bureau of Investigation reviews the shooting.
