The Carver County Attorney's Office announced it declined to press charges against two Carver County Sheriff deputies, who killed a Chanhassen 16-year-old on July 13.

Archer Amorosi died in the yard of his home after he was shot by Cpl. Jake Hodge and Deputy Travis Larson, according to the Attorney's Office 33-page legal analysis on the case. He would have been in his junior year at Minnetonka High School.

The Carver County Attorney's Office reviewed reports, transcribed statements, autopsy, toxicological findings, squad videos, audio statements and a single body camera video involved in the incident used by South Lake Minnetonka Police. Carver County Sheriff's Office deputies do not currently use body cameras.

"Because the use of deadly force under the facts of this case is justified under Minnesota law, the CCAO is declining to charge either officer with a crime," according to an Attorney's Office press release.
